In the Spotlight

Each month we will spotlight a particular style of powwow dance.

Feather Dance (Naa Dosh)

The Feather Dance or Nee-dash (the dance) as it is called in Athabaskan, is the principle traditional Dance ceremony of Siletz Indians. It originated from Southwest Oregon Athabaskan people (Just south of Coos Bay to Crescent City Ca. and inland to the villages almost to present day I-5.) In ancient times and up to the 1850's and our peoples removal from their original lands the Nee-dash was held every winter around the solstice (The shortest day of the year.) When the people were in their original places the dance was held for 10 days in the larger villages. Once the Siletz Reservation was established many other Siletz tribes began to participate in the Dance and still do to this day. The whole reason for the Dance is to thank the creator for making the world and us. Songs are sung during the Dance and dancers come out in a side to side motion, women upright and men crouching low to the floor planks of the Dance House. The Dance line is a crescent shape facing the fire in the center of the house.

Prayers are also said in between each song and dance that recount the SW coast creation story of how the world was put together for us to live on. The Dance is now 3 days. Dancers dress plainly on the first night and gradually end up with the finest regalia by the end dance on the last night. Really it is all about giving thanks through song, dance and prayer.

If Your Per Capita Check Hasn't Arrived...

As everyone knows, the mail is very unpredictable. Some people will get their checks right away, while others will not get them for several days.

For people who live outside of Oregon, it will take even longer than those in the state.

If you did not get your address change in on time, that could cause a delay.

You must wait until August 22nd before calling about your check.

There is nothing that can be done until that time.

CONGRATULATIONS!!

Angelica Espino has bought her first home thanks to the Down Payment Assistance Program (and other resources).

Congrats and good luck to you Angelica, Anthony and Dominic!!

Plan Early for School Immunizations and Physicals to Ensure Your Child's Health and Beat the Back-to-School Rush

Many parents aren't seriously thinking about back-to-school preparations in July and August. And while some activities – shopping for supplies, going to try-outs and orientation, arranging carpools – can wait until August, you might find yourself in a bind if you put off necessary vaccinations and physicals. You're probably aware that Local laws requires a certain number of doses of mandated vaccines before the first day of school. What you might not know is that you could face long wait times and even shortages of certain vaccines if you wait until the last few weeks before school.

The following vaccines usually are required (except with valid exemptions) for elementary, middle and high school students: diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis, polio, chickenpox, hepatitis A and B, measles, mumps and rubella. While immunizations may not be required for all, immunizing your children is a way to help prevent the spread of communicable diseases at school and protect the well-being of your family at home.

In addition to immunizations, students participating in athletics or other extra-curricular activities may be required to undergo a physical examination before school starts. For some sports and extra-curricular organizations – especially football, cheerleading and band – practice begins weeks before the first day of school and will require physicals even earlier. A proper school physical should include both a medical history and a physical examination to ensure early detection of any health-related issues. For school-aged children, the American Academy of Pediatrics recommends an annual physical for those entering kindergarten (five and six years of age), then every other year and resuming an annual exam during middle school and teen years.

So don't get too lethargic during the days of summer. Avoid the rush and get your children's back-to-school vaccinations and physicals early. You can spend the rest of the season enjoying yourself with the knowledge that your kids are healthy and prepared for the school year.

Summer activities continue:

It's gotten hot, and people are looking for places to cool down. More people can be found around sources of water, and if you haven't reserved space at the coast, you may not get in that camping trip (happened to me last weekend!). With the heat comes an increase in irritability as our bodies naturally dehydrate. To help combat that irritability, remember to drink more water than you want to, take breaks, and seek out shade to rest in.

(Vidale Falls)

(Sasquatch at the Zip Line)

Summer experiences:

Many activities are being held by various programs in the Siletz tribe. One activity I got the honor of participating in recently was the 9 Tribes Suicide Prevention camp hosted by the Klamath tribe, June 19th—23rd. 11 youth from the Siletz tribe joined many youth from most of the other 9 tribes at Mountain Lakes Bible Camp and the surrounding areas, such as Crater Lake. Activities included learning how to make moccasins and hand drums, zip lining or a boat ride, and an adventure to Crater Lake where some youth jumped into the freezing cold water!

(Campfire Owl Dance)

Check out some of the sights we saw:

(Beautiful Crater Lake)

Traditional Coping

August is the month to get yourself and your family to the Siletz Powwow. This year it is August 10—12 and will include a dance to honor survivors and those lost to sexual assault and domestic violence. It should be a powerful time of healing for the tribe. As always, be sure to remember our Elders, making sure they stay cool and hydrated.
